The famous Skagen Painters and the incredible phenomenon of two oceans 'crashing' into each other attracts many visitors to the small village of Skagen.

A visit to Skagen will take you to Denmark's most northern point, known for its incredible light, created by the sun's reflection on the sea and sand; its characteristic yellow fishermen houses; the famous Skagen painters' colony and the unique, natural phenomenon of two seas colliding in spectacular fashion. Board a comfortable coach for a 90-minute drive north of Aalborg to the small fishing village of Skagen whose history dates back to the 13-century.

The stunning light, beautiful nature and the hard and dangerous life of the fishermen inspired many famous artists. Perhaps you have heard of the Skagen Painters Colony? Amongst them were: Anne and Michael Ancher, P.S Krøyer, Holga Drachmann, Laurits Tuxen and Carl Locher, to name a few. We stop first to visit Skagen Art Gallery, where some of the Colony's finest work of the 'Danish Golden Age 1830-1930' is displayed.

From here we experience a traditional Danish lunch: delicious, homemade smørrebrød (open sandwiches), served at a local restaurant. Leaving here we drive north, along the way passing a collection of Skagen's lighthouses: the oldest, a wooden bascule light from 1627, the white lighthouse from 1747 and the recently deactivated, Grey lighthouse from 1858.

Boarding a tractor coach we drive through the sand dunes to visit Denmark's northernmost point, Grenen, host to a unique natural phenomenon. Here the Baltic and the North Seas, crash into each other, culminating in a final encounter of lively waves visible to the naked eye. We invite you to stand with one foot in each sea and be amazed as you watch the waves colliding into each other from opposite directions.

Departing Skagen we make a photo stop at the Sand Covered Church, a spectacular sight and a reminder of the force of nature. This 14-century parish church fell victim to the migrating sands of the area. Today only the ancient church tower remains visible above the sand. Returning to our coach we enjoy the drive back to your ship waiting at the quay.
